WS 1 · STEPHEN GILLIGAN, PhD

The Problem is the Solution:
Symptoms as Identity Transformers

A key idea in Milton Erickson's work was that a person's problematic experiences and behaviors can be skillfully accepted and utilized as the basis for therapeutic change. Self-Relations psychotherapy develops this idea further, emphasizing symptoms as indicating the death of an old identity and the impending birth of a new identity. Thus, we don't try to "get rid of" depression, anxiety, or other "acting out/acting in" expressions, but instead invite them into a human relationship of "sponsorship", where their healing and helpful nature may be realized. We will see how a therapist can generate a ritual space where symptoms and other disturbing experiences can be "midwived" into new identities.

Separating Fact from Fiction in the Era of Evidence-Based Practice

As a treatment professional, it is likely that you are increasingly confronted with the prospect of trying to match difficult-to-treat clients with a dizzying array of "best practice" treatment models described in the literature. In this workshop, 40 years of research on "what works" will be translated into empirically supported therapeutic skills that you can actually use in a practical, efficient and individualized manner. Participants will not only learn how to deal with the most difficult and challenging clients, but also learn a method of incorporating valid and reliable outcome information into the treatment process.

 Session Really Therapeutic

The empirical-experimental clinical work carried out during the past years by the Center for Strategic Therapy in Arezzo, on the basis of previous research focused on the specific form of treatment for specific pathologies, has developed a particular technique for conducting the first session as a real therapeutic intervention as well as a diagnostic investigation. This technique involves the illusion of alternative questions, reframing paraphrases, sensation-evoking formulas and prescribing the solution as a form of conjoint discovery between patient and therapist.

Ericksonian Strategic and Classical Hypnotherapy for Autism

Autism, a developmental disorder, is a challenge that has been focused on from several treatment perspectives – from nutrition science to neuropharmacology. Classical and Ericksonian hypnosis offer significant advantages for improvement. A program will be presented that has been successfully applied in clinical research and practice. Its main features and case results will be presented.

Working with the “I” of Pain

This workshop addresses the treatment of acute and chronic pain that often evolves from emotional and physical trauma. Special emphasis is placed on hard-to-treat, complex symptoms such as fibromyalgia, chronic fatigue, and migraines. Conversational Ericksonian strategies that facilitate ego-state therapy will be emphasized to help maximize the self-regulation of pain states.

 the Brain: The Evolving Paradigm

During the Decade of the Brain, fMRI and SPECT scans provided new insights. But after the dust settled, it was not clear how therapists could use this information in the service of mental health. Combining Ericksonian paradigms with the latest science of brain dynamics, this workshop will lay out a step by step methodology that can be easily followed and implemented to improve and optimize your clients' emotional and cognitive functioning.

Hypnotic Strategies to Improve Children's and Adolescents' Self-Esteem & Identity Formation

Self-esteem, self-confidence and self-concept are closely connected with the development of human identity. The enhancement of self-esteem and identity formation can be used effectively in psychotherapy with children, especially in the treatment of anxiety disorders, depression, post-traumatic stress disorder and many other social difficulties. Hypnotic interventions proved to be effective in working with children and adolescents on an individual basis.

Experiencing the Ripple Effect: An Ericksonian Approach to the Treatment of Addictions

This workshop offers a practical step-by-step approach to overcoming a multitude of the addictive disorders. The first hour presents the foundation of this comprehensive treatment which is based on learning the principles of cognitive and behavioral therapy, and the ideas of Milton Erickson and Michael Yapko. Hypnosis is the cornerstone of this treatment because "addicts" love things that help them escape their everyday reality. Hypnosis is used to target multidimensional small changes in your patient which eventually progresses into a new and lasting lifestyle. The second hour presents a live clinical demonstration of an assessment of a person, their addictive problem and its hypnotic treatment.

This technique is among the most crucial to good therapy. Participants will be guided through several exercises to help them learn and practice the construction of six forms of indirect suggestions and four forms of binds. A demonstration using these forms will illustrate the implementation of this set of language techniques for the induction and treatment process. The use of indirect suggestions in further treatment will be outlined.

Forensic Frontiers

Clinicians who practice hypnosis must be familiar with its legal and ethical boundaries. In recent years, courts have paid increasing attention to the clinical and forensic use of hypnosis. Many lawyers have targeted hypnosis as what they call an "experimental and dangerous" type of treatment. We will discuss how therapists may simultaneously protect the legal rights of their patients, and may protect themselves from lawsuits. In addressing current clinical concerns, we will examine the rich and colorful history of hypnosis as it relates to law.

The Missing Theory of Strategic Psychotherapy

Many strategic therapists eschew theory and sacrifice grounding. Missing theory resides in basic sciences. Hypnosis data reveal consciousness and volition as paradoxes, resolvable through evolutionary biology. Human's minds evolved as shared self-deceptions. Theory can predict transference, paradox, game antitheses, Erickson's "common sense psychology," but it constrains their optimum utilization.

Passion, Poetry, Progress: Tools for Getting Unstuck

Presenting clients have often repeated ineffective "remedies," practicing futility. In this workshop, attendees will learn ways to help clients change the game, get on track and unstuck. John's utilization skills and Ric's soul-baring poetry will spark fresh approaches in their own practice and work.

 WS 55 • MICHAEL MUNION, MA
An Ericksonian Toolbox

This workshop provides instruction and hands-on experience with Ericksonian interventions less commonly addressed than hypnosis. These include anecdotes, implication, paradox, and task assignments.

 WS 56 • MICHAEL HOYT, PhD
Single-Session Psychotherapy: Enhancing One-Meeting Potentials

Many therapies involve brief lengths of treatment. A structure will be presented for organizing the tasks and skills involved in different phases (pre, early, middle, and late, follow-through) of therapy. Numerous case examples, including video, will illustrate brief therapy techniques in both initial sessions and in the course of longer treatments.

 WS 57 • KATHRYN ROSSI, PhD
A New View of Creative Menopause:
 Shape Up and Fly Better Than Ever

The most profound transition in a woman's life is menopause. This is the time to expand brain plasticity and neurogenesis and strengthen relationships and understating. How can we harness the new neuroscience advances to grow our brains and create greater flexibility in life transitions of women and their partners through menopause and beyond? Come and learn through lecture, experiential exercises and discussion how to facilitate the positive new you.

Bringing Life to Metaphors

Metaphors bring life to therapy by creating a familiar space in which change can be explored. This participatory workshop will provide a three-step approach to finding metaphors in everyday life.

WS 59 · LILIAN BORGES ZEIG, MA

Experiential Assessment in Hypnotherapy

Experiential techniques in the early stages of the therapy session can make therapy dynamic, alive and foster change. In this workshop we will demonstrate how to open "the phenomenological world" of the client, where meaning and solutions are available, and discover that we made our interview our intervention.

WS 60 · MARILIA BAKER, MSW

Sailing the Seven Seas of Multicultural Competencies in Hypnosis

The profound demographic shifts occurring in the United States, especially in the Hispanic/Latino population--projected at 98 million by 2013--are urgently calling for the culturally aware, multiculturally responsive and competent hypnotherapist. Culturally focused hypnosis, as a remarkable tool for effective and skillful communication, is examined. Seven key concepts are proposed. Participants are invited to sail the Seven Cs of multicultural competencies in hypnosis to enhance perception and steer the course of action.

WS 61 · TERESA ROBLES, PhD

Working with Groups through Universal Topics

We talk about Dr. Erickson's tailoring interventions, but his strength also was derived from the utilization of universal topics through metaphors. After a brief presentation of an Ericksonian group, participants will experience working in it, discuss about it and build interventions for working with universal topics in groups.

ADVANCED ERICKSONIAN HYPNOSIS
COURSE 1Advanced Induction

Induction can be a method of delivering therapy, not just a means of eliciting trance. We will explore advanced techniques of utilization, seeding, motivating and pattern disruption.

12:00-1:30 PM · LUNCH*1:30-4:30 PM

AEH 2 · STEPHEN LANKTON, MSW, DAHB

ADVANCED ERICKSONIAN HYPNOSIS
COURSE 2Advanced Indirection Language and Techniques: Indirect Suggestion, Binds and Confusion

Participants will be guided through several exercises to help them learn and practice the construction of four forms of confusion technique, bring the number of indirect suggestions to six and the number of therapeutic binds to four. A demonstration using these forms will illustrate the implementations of this set of language techniques for the induction and treatment process.

Presentations are professionally recorded and available for purchase onsite at the Congress.
