

Rats in the kitchen

There are  $n$  sleeping rats in the kitchen. We randomly place  $n$  cats to catch the rats (one cat for each rat). We notice that no three animals are collinear. Show that every cat can choose a different rat to catch such that the straight paths from the cats to the rats do not intersect.

